“The mentoring relationship is typically one of sounding board and trusted confidant. Personal chemistry is vital and relevant experience essential for the interaction to be both valuable and engaging. It is a two-way exchange where each benefits, both professionally and personally, from the conversation.”

Global leaders in mentoring

CMi is the world's leading mentoring partner for CEOs, CEO succession candidates, CFOs, Senior Executives and Chairs, accelerating their performance and impact. Our breadth and depth of expertise allow us to deliver a mentoring experience that is unrivalled globally.

Stepping into a leadership role is fraught with risk, often requiring business leaders to confront a whole new set of experiences and decisions. Behaviours, leadership style and relationship skills become increasingly important, but senior leaders are often assumed to “know it all”, and exposing gaps in knowledge or judgement can feel like a weakness.

Confidential access to our seasoned and independent Mentors enables leaders to test ideas with a highly experienced and impartial adviser, who offers a fresh perspective and a valuable second opinion.

Each mentoring engagement is bespoke and tailored to the specific context of the Mentee and their business. It adapts to the individual's current needs and anticipated future opportunities. It is all about development in situ, which allows for maximum productivity in tandem with the individual's operational life.

CMi's mentoring is targeted at specific turning-points in a leader's career; for example, at the time of promotion from Executive Committee to Board. Leaders are invariably closely scrutinised by senior colleagues, and new leaders are required to make far-reaching business decisions that are often fraught with risk and complexity. The mentoring is a key risk-mitigation factor for these strategic appointments, as the counsel and guidance of an experienced Chair Mentor can make the difference between success and failure.

Our mentoring is directed towards 5 distinct groups:

- Chairs
- Chief Executive Officers
- CEO succession candidates
- Chief Financial Officers
- Senior Executives

What makes us unique?

CMi provides business leaders with structured, personalised, and confidential mentoring, from an international roster of over 90 Chairs, with Board experience from 61 countries and a global presence across 19 nationalities.

With the largest global roster of pre-eminent Board Chairs and CEOs, CMi represents unmatched knowledge, experience, and insight across almost all industries and economies worldwide.

Bespoke Engagements

Mentor selection is vital. Mentor background, geographical/sector experience and network are important; however, personal chemistry is the overriding factor for a successful and mutually rewarding relationship. Each mentoring engagement is carefully tailored to align with both the company's and the Mentee's defined goals. Each Mentor/Mentee relationship develops its own style, which is driven by the needs of the Mentee.

Confidentiality is paramount. Each engagement is governed by individual discussions stipulating what information can be shared between the Mentor(s) and the Mentee's company, developed with the Mentee's knowledge and agreement.

Mutual benefits:

- 1. Confidential relationship.
Clear rules of engagement ensure that both parties commit to total confidentiality. This emboldens Mentees to disclose without fear of repercussions and creates a safe space for close communication and a long-term collaboration.
- 2. Critical thinking.
Leaders are often required to make far-reaching business decisions charged with risk and complexity. Gaining the necessary wisdom in such situations contributes to smart assessment and better decision-making.

Our record speaks for itself

- CMi has provided independent external mentoring for over 180 Chairs, CEOs and CFOs
- We have mentored leaders in over 120 global businesses
- Approximately 90 per cent of our Mentees are Executive Committee and/or Board members

400

CMi has mentored over 400 global leaders in the last 20 years

CEO Mentoring

CEOs are under increasing pressure to deal with new and complex demands from a growing variety of stakeholders. They must routinely make decisions on matters they have never experienced before, all under the pressure of 24/7 public scrutiny. In such high-stakes situations, CEOs benefit from the sage counsel of highly experienced Mentors who have been there themselves.

The CEO tests ideas with a highly experienced and impartial confidant, providing a fresh perspective and valuable second opinion

CEO mentoring is focused specifically on two or three themes per session in order to drill deeply enough to yield meaningful substance in the exchange of views and experience. Such topics might include “Relationships with your Chair and Board members/owners” or “Developing your leadership team and successfully delegating so the burden doesn’t rest solely on your shoulders”.

Our Mentors offer timely, context-specific insight drawn from their own life experience. The choice of Mentor and the topics discussed are driven by the Mentee, affording an unparalleled level of personal support which is highly relevant to each CEO.

Having sat in the hot seat as the CEOs of large, global, complex organisations, our Mentors help CEOs to make better decisions, fulfil stakeholder expectations, avoid costly mistakes and become the best leader they can be.

CMi’s Mentor roster includes former CEOs of some of the world’s largest companies

“The quality of the CMi mentoring conversations is unrivalled. The opportunity to exchange thoughts with people who have been there before is extremely valuable for me.”

Marco Alverà, CEO, TES

CEO Succession

Overseeing the nurturing, retention and motivation of a small group of individuals, who feature predominantly in the CEO succession plan, is a Board-level responsibility.

This top tier of individuals – destined to be the leaders of the future, has to be stretched with increasingly demanding assignments to assess their suitability for expanded roles and main Board responsibilities.

The CEO succession mentoring programme enables internal candidates to anticipate how to manage behavioural, personal and social-interaction issues associated with being the CEO more effectively before taking up the role.

Our leading CEO succession mentoring programme provides structured, personalised and confidential sessions with accomplished Chairs/former CEOs who have significant and real-life experience of leading large, complex businesses. Having seen CEO succession processes from both sides of the table, our Mentors understand the challenges, pitfalls and pressures.

Developing successful candidates

Developing strong internal CEO succession candidates who are ready for this new challenge is both the responsibility and the legacy of the Chair and the incumbent CEO. Mentoring complements a well-managed transition process by assisting each candidate to best prepare for the role of CEO and understand what it encompasses and involves. It also provides opportunities to solicit a confidential second opinion with a neutral, seasoned former CEO on key issues that are likely to be encountered in the new role.

The CEO succession mentoring process remains completely confidential throughout – this is absolutely essential in order to be fully effective. Once appointed, the new CEO continues the relationship with the Mentors during the early stages of their new tenure. When the CEO is established, they will often request a new Mentor to provide a different perspective.

CEOs or CEO succession candidates mentored by CMi

Our CMi programme usually has two principal objectives – how to succeed in the current role, while also being prepared for the next

For the internal succession candidate, relationships with former peers and colleagues are transformed and the responsibility of company-wide decisions weighs heavily. This is a pivotal stage in a leader's career and can have a significant impact on the fortunes of the company and its share price.

CFO Mentoring

The CFO plays a critical role in the organisation and the Boardroom. Representing the company internally, with shareholders, stakeholders and in the public eye, the role of the CFO is central. Few get sufficient formal preparation befitting a strategic partner to the CEO, leading the organisation.

Retaining objectivity and independence in the Boardroom, while being part of the management team, a CFO must balance analytical skills, strategic thinking and team leadership.

Understanding how to navigate this complex mix of expertise is best achieved with the help of an experienced Mentor who brings relevant experience, broad perspective and fresh thinking.

Mentoring for CFOs often encompasses dealing with:

- the Board on issues of strategy
- relationships with the CEO, the Executive team and Non-Executives
- interaction with investors, analysts and the media
- portfolio issues

180

CMi has provided independent external mentoring for over 180 Chairs, CEOs and CFOs

Many of our Mentors are former CFOs of large international companies, with listings across the globe

Senior Executive Development

Building the leaders of the future

CMI's bespoke Senior Executives mentoring programme is for those Senior Executives who must be retained, nurtured and invested in.

The Senior Executive is partnered with one or two of our Chair Mentors. An important Board responsibility is planning and overseeing the nurturing, retention and motivation of those individuals, who are running major functions and business units and may be future CEOs.

As Senior Executives take on their first major ExCo or Board roles, they are faced with life at the top of a complex, often highly regulated market, under the spotlight of a vast number of stakeholders.

To support this transition from operator to leader, each Senior Executive is partnered with experienced Mentors to develop them into effective enterprise-wide leaders.

Our CMI programme usually has two principal objectives – how to succeed in the current role, while also being prepared for the next

The personal development resulting from the CMI mentoring experience will be of considerable value both to the leader and the sponsoring company

Chair Mentoring

A profoundly different and distinctive leadership challenge awaits those aspiring to chair a Board for the first time or step into a Non-Executive leadership role.

Top-level prior experience, gained in both Executive and Non-Executive roles, takes candidates or recently appointed Chairs only so far.

When helping others to become successful Chairs and Non-Executive Directors, each of our Mentors brings vast experience and a deep understanding to the Boardroom table. As counsel and “critical friends” to the CEO and the Board, they provide a highly valuable sounding board. They also share their expertise, their “tools of the job”, so you can address current or future issues with confidence.

Our Chairs have served on over 175 listed company Boards, across all sectors, in 61 different countries

Whether a candidate or nominee, the role of Chair involves embarking on a subtle transition from operator to influencer, from counsellor to consensus builder, and above all from talker to listener

Reflections from a recently appointed Chair

“I anticipated before taking my first Chair appointment that the role and responsibilities of Chair are utterly different from those of a CEO, especially with no direct control of resources to make things happen. The need to perfect a different leadership style, while in theory being obvious, is in practice more testing. So, mentoring support from seasoned Chairs was extremely helpful.

Whether as a first-time Chair taking on a settled ‘steady-state’ Board, or a team that has to be reshaped, one needs help to play oneself in.

Working with experienced Chair Mentors was invaluable in three key respects in being able to:

- pick their brains on the ‘tools’ of the job (for example, preparing for and running a good AGM)
- brainstorm the issues that needed to be addressed
- discuss freely anxieties and uncertainties, drawing upon the Mentors’ experience of dealing with similar issues themselves, including the lessons they had learned from their own setbacks.”

“Mentoring accelerates leadership impact, in allowing the individual to be the very best they can, as soon as they can.”

Dame Vivienne Cox CBE, Victrex plc, Chair

Executive Transition

Strategic next role advice

CMi provides strategic and bespoke support for senior leaders at a transition point in their careers. We craft a bespoke panel from our roster of experienced Chairs and CEOs as advisers/discussion partners tailored to the executive's individual needs.

The panel will provide a trusted sounding board to ensure the Executive can reflect, reassess, explore and challenge ideas, to best plan the next phase of their leadership development, en route to securing a future role.

Each expert panel typically consists of three to six Mentors who are carefully selected based on relevant industry and geographical insights, to enable confidential one-off conversations and providing the Executive a unique opportunity to tap into their experience and international network.

“Honest mentoring is the best possible gift for CEOs.”

Jean-Christophe Tellier, CEO, UCB SA, and CMi Mentee

Jakob Stausholm

“They say that history repeats, but throughout your career you are often faced with ‘firsts’. Having two very experienced Mentors has been invaluable for me when navigating unknown terrain from significant unplanned management changes while undergoing a CEO selection process, and starting up as a CEO. The mentoring process has provided me with important perspectives, and above all an inner calmness and clarity to do what I think is right.”

Jakob Stausholm, CEO, Rio Tinto

C.S. Venkatakrishnan

“The quality of the CMi mentoring conversations is unrivalled. The opportunity to exchange thoughts with people who have been there before is extremely valuable for me.”

Marco Alverà, CEO, TES

“I worked with two very experienced Mentors for a year before I became CEO. I sought their counsel and identified challenges privately and confidentially. I always knew the mentoring was beneficial, but it was only when I became CEO that I fully appreciated how invaluable the advice and guidance had been in preparing me for the new role. There are some things that you can learn only from people who have been there and done it.”

C.S. Venkatakrishnan, Group CEO, Barclays plc
