Exceptional leadership

Reaching the top in business takes talent. Becoming exceptional – making the right calls under constant scrutiny when the stakes are high – takes something extra.

CMi was set up to bridge that gap: providing structured, top-tier mentoring for and by the world's most accomplished leaders. We've led this field ever since.

90+

DISTINGUISHED INTERNATIONAL MENTORS

Bespoke, board-level mentoring for pre-eminent global executives

CMi pioneered mentoring for top-tier executives as a service. We created the category, refined it through experience and continue to set the standard.

By providing exclusive access to the largest global roster of pre-eminent board chairs and CEOs, we offer a wealth of valuable knowledge, business experience and hard-earned insights across all industries and economies worldwide.

Every engagement is curated for discussions that are frank and forthright yet always completely confidential.

A whole spectrum of issues can be tackled – from personal leadership style to stakeholder challenges to strategic decisions – always with absolute discretion.

This is how you exploit market-defining opportunities, build organisational resilience and enable leadership to deliver lasting value.

Bespoke, structured engagements

Our model is systematic, yet personal

Each CMi mentoring engagement is curated and designed for absolute discretion, free from internal pressures or reporting lines.

A clear structure is agreed from the outset, based on development in situ, to ensure the relationship is purposeful, productive and discreetly aligned with operational demands. It evolves with the mentee's goals, while aligning with their professional commitments.

Chemistry and clarity

Mentor selection is a critical strength of our team. We know all our mentors personally – their expertise, experience and mentoring style. And, while sector understanding, location and network matter, personal chemistry is all-important.

Each engagement is designed to reflect both the mentee's development agenda and the organisation's strategic priorities. It begins with a confidential introduction, enabling both parties to explore the personal chemistry fit and agree on expectations.

The working relationship then develops naturally in response to the mentee's working priorities and emerging leadership style.

THE PRINCIPLES WE UPHOLD

1. Confidentiality

Each mentoring relationship is strictly confidential. It's a protected space where mentees can speak openly and reflect without reservation – an essential condition for meaningful progress.

2. Critical thinking

Leaders must often make high-stakes decisions charged with risk and complexity. CMi mentoring provides the rigorous, challenging conversations needed for clear and confident judgement calls.

3. An unparalleled sounding board

Our Mentors bring vast executive and board experience, truly understanding the complexities and dynamics of leadership. Mentees have a tremendous opportunity to get a fresh perspective, test leadership ideas and seek a valuable second opinion.

Mentoring for CEOs

Learn from those who've faced the pressure first-hand

CEOs face an expanding array of complex, high-stakes demands from a growing variety of stakeholders.

They must often make decisions on new and unfamiliar matters at speed and under constant scrutiny. In such critical moments, the counsel of a seasoned mentor – someone with experience of similar pressures – can be invaluable.

THAT'S WHERE CMi'S MENTORS STEP IN

Our Mentors offer an extraordinary breadth of perspective and proven impact. Their timely, context-specific insight is drawn from decades of top-level leadership.

CEO mentoring typically focuses on two or three key themes per session, enabling the depth and focus that yields meaningful substance.

Topics may include:

- Navigating relationships with the chair and board
- Building a high-performing leadership team
- Sharing the burden of leadership without losing control.

The choice of Mentor and the topics discussed are driven by the CEO, ensuring highly personalised, relevant and focused guidance at every stage.

At CMi, we believe great leadership is shaped by those who have already walked the path. Our role is to match leaders with the right voice at the right time – and to create the space where real progress can happen.

My CMi Mentor has been priceless — helping me navigate several complex issues with clarity and confidence. I've learned a great deal — not only through hearing about real-world business experience, but by testing and refining my own thinking in a space that is safe, insightful, and challenging in all the right ways. Above all, it has been an energising experience — one that has sharpened my thinking and approach”

MARGHERITA DELLA VALLE
CEO, VODAFONE PLC

CEOs can test ideas with a highly experienced, impartial confidant, for a fresh perspective or a valuable second opinion.

CMi's Mentor roster includes former CEOs of some of the world's largest companies.

Planning for CEO succession

Developing a strong internal CEO succession bench is a responsibility for chairs and CEOs that will also form part of their legacy

That's why, over the past two decades, CMi has mentored hundreds of CEO succession candidates at top companies worldwide.

Our leading CEO succession mentoring is structured, confidential and highly personalised. It is delivered by former chairs and CEOs with first-hand experience in leading large, complex businesses through transition.

DEVELOPING SUCCESSION CANDIDATES

Mentoring complements a well-managed transition by enabling candidates to both prepare for the CEO role and understand its demands. It also offers a discreet space to seek second opinions from experienced, impartial former CEOs on likely challenges.

The CMi succession programme has two clear goals: to help leaders excel in their current role and to prepare them for the demands of the next.

For internal candidates, former peer relationships shift – and the weight of company-wide decision-making becomes personal and immediate. It's a defining moment in a leader's career. One that can shape the company's future and influence its market value.

Having experienced CEO succession from both sides of the table, our mentors understand the challenges, pressures and pitfalls.

By balancing encouragement with challenge, our mentors enable leaders – and the boards that appoint them – to realise potential and mitigate risk.

Once appointed, the new CEO continues working with their mentor, or sometimes requests a new match to gain a fresh perspective as they settle into the role.

Complete confidentiality is fundamental to the success of this process. Only in a trusted, discreet environment can candidates engage openly, reflect honestly and fully benefit from the guidance they receive.

CFO Mentoring

From Finance Leader to Strategic Partner

The CFO plays a pivotal role in the organisation and the boardroom.

As the face of the business to shareholders, stakeholders and the wider world, they operate at the heart of the enterprise. Yet few receive the structured preparation worthy of a strategic partner to the CEO.

Retaining objectivity in the boardroom with a seat on the board, today's CFO must combine analytical rigour, strategic judgement and team leadership.

Navigating this complexity is easier with the guidance of a seasoned mentor – someone who brings not only relevant experience but fresh perspective and sound judgement.

Mentoring for CFOs means dealing with:

- the Board on issues of strategy
- the CEO, the Executive team and non-executives
- investors, analysts and the media
- portfolio issues.

Many of our mentors are former CFOs of large, listed multinationals.

Senior Executive Development

Preparing tomorrow's leaders

A key board responsibility is to ensure the thoughtful development and sustained engagement of executives leading major functions and business units. Those with the potential to be future CEOs.

When senior executives step into their first ExCo or board role, it's a pivotal shift. Now they must navigate the realities of leading in complex, often highly regulated markets – and under scrutiny from a range of stakeholders.

A seasoned mentor can enable them to grow into confident, enterprise-wide leaders.

The personal development resulting from the CMi mentoring experience will be of considerable value both to the leader and the sponsoring company

Stepping up to the board

A distinctly different leadership challenge awaits those aspiring to chair a board or step into a non-executive role

It's a subtle transition from operator to influencer, from counsellor to consensus builder and, above all, from talker to listener.

When enabling others to succeed as chairs and non-executive directors, our mentors bring vast experience and a deep understanding of board dynamics.

They also share practical frameworks and hard-won strategies that will equip chairs and non-executive directors to address current and emerging challenges with clarity and confidence.

Stepping into the role of Chair of a global, publicly listed company is a tremendous privilege—and having the chance to choose mentors from the world's most experienced Chairs is invaluable.”

CHAIR OF GLOBAL COMPANY BASED IN SWITZERLAND

Reflections from a recently appointed chair:

“I anticipated before taking my first Chair appointment that the role and responsibilities of Chair are utterly different from those of a CEO, especially with no direct control of resources to make things happen. The need to perfect a different leadership style, while in theory being obvious, is in practice more testing. So, mentoring support from seasoned Chairs was extremely helpful.

Whether as a first-time Chair taking on a settled ‘steady-state’ Board, or a team that has to be reshaped, one needs help to play oneself in.

Working with experienced Chair Mentors was invaluable in three key respects in being able to:

- pick their brains on the ‘tools’ of the job (for example, preparing for and running a good AGM)
- brainstorm the issues that needed to be addressed
- discuss freely anxieties and uncertainties, drawing upon the Mentors’ experience of dealing with similar issues themselves, including the lessons they had learned from their own setbacks.”

Our Chairs have served on over 175 listed company Boards, across all sectors, in 61 different countries.

Being able to discuss the challenges of a new major NED role with an independent Mentor adds real value and focus. My CMi Mentor gave me space to test and weigh ideas, the feedback was direct — based on years of experience and wisdom and tailored to situations. The CMi network is unique, extensive and international.”

SYLVIE GREGOIRE
NON-EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, NOVO NORDISK AS

There are very few places where a sitting CEO can speak openly, think clearly, and be truly challenged in total confidence. CMi mentoring creates that place — and it does so with a level of integrity, insight, and discretion that is unmatched. It is tailored directly to the realities of senior leadership — not in theory, but in practice. The mentoring is sharp, grounded, and consistently focused on what really matters. For me, it has been a critical source of clarity during moments of pressure, complexity, and change.”

SEAN DOYLE
CEO, BRITISH AIRWAYS

Having worked with three different CMi Mentors at different stages of my career I have particularly appreciated the care CMi has taken in ensuring the Mentors background, style and personality match my needs and values. Sparring with someone who has been in my shoes and fully understands the issues and decisions I face every day is invaluable and unparalleled. It has been a practical and impactful experience.

MOHIT JOSHI
CEO, TECH MAHINDRA

I worked with two very experienced Mentors for a year before I became CEO. I sought their counsel and identified challenges privately and confidentially. I always knew the mentoring was beneficial, but it was only when I became CEO that I fully appreciated how invaluable the advice and guidance had been in preparing me for the new role. There are some things that you can learn only from people who have been there and done it.”
